

↑ Shetland Museum and Archives
Promote Shetland / Euan Myles

↑ Small boat harbour and Tolbooth
VisitScotland / Kenny Lam

↑ Shopping for knitwear
Promote Shetland / Euan Myles

↑ Dining out in Lerwick
Promote Shetland / Euan Myles

Useful information

Getting around Shetland

For general travel information, including bus timetables and car and bike hire, visit shetland.org/getting-around

Ferry to Bressay

A car ferry runs regularly, leaving from behind Albert Buildings, Lerwick. No booking required.

Visitor information point

Shetland Museum and Archives | +44 (0)1595 695057

Geopark Shetland

Discover geosites across Shetland | shetland.org/geopark

Museums

Shetland Museum and Archives, Hay's Dock
Shetland Textile Museum, Böd of Gremista
Up Helly Aa Exhibition, St Sunniva Street

Public toilets

Harbour House opposite Victoria Pier
Knab | King George V Play Park

Post Offices

Commercial Street | Toll Clock Shopping Centre

Shops

Commercial Street | Commercial Road
For information, see livinglerwick.co.uk
Toll Clock Shopping Centre

Leisure centre and swimming pool

Clickimin Leisure Complex | +44 (0)1595 741000

Health centre

Lerwick Health Centre, South Road | +44 (0)1595 693201

Hospital

Gilbert Bain Hospital, South Road | +44 (0)1595 743000

EV charging points

chargeplacescotland.org

Police 101

shetland.org/lerwick

2026 | Disclaimer All details believed to be accurate at the time of going to print.

Lerwick

Britain's most northerly town

Welcome to Lerwick

Lerwick, the islands' capital, takes its name from the Old Norse Leirvik, meaning 'muddy bay', and is sheltered by the island of Bressay.

The natural harbour attracts a wide range of visiting boats and the town has a lot to offer visitors with plenty of shops, cafes and tourist attractions, including Shetland Museum and Archives, Mareel arts centre and the ancient broch of Clickimin.

A short history of Lerwick

Lerwick wasn't always the capital of Shetland. In fact, it wasn't until the 16th century when it became an important station for the Dutch herring fleet that it began to grow as a community. What started as a scattering of huts along a winding shoreline track, soon developed into a thriving network of tightly packed narrow lanes. These lead on to what is now Commercial Street – the town's main shopping area. It took over the role of island capital from Scalloway in 1708.

In the 19th century, new docks to accommodate the fishing fleet were created to the north of the town. Hay's Dock, at Freefield, was the centre of the isles' fishing industry, the site of which is now home to Shetland Museum and Archives. The town continued to expand during the 19th century up beyond Hillhead, where the Town Hall is located, sprawling south into the area of Sound and north into Gremista.

Today, Lerwick is home to around 6,500 people and remains a thriving port town, welcoming commercial vessels, fishing boats and cruise ships all year round.

↑ Albert Dock David Gifford

Things to see and do

There are lots of visitor attractions in Lerwick, so it's worth scheduling a day or two of your time to explore the town and what it has to offer.

A scenic walk around Lerwick

One of the best ways to appreciate the sights of Lerwick is on foot. A path follows the cliff top from Twageos Road to Breiwick Road, providing an easy walk past the cemetery and around the Knab, where you can enjoy the viewpoint with its excellent vantage point overlooking Bressay Sound. Wave-washed slabs of gently sloping sandstone provide haul out points for the many common seals that can be seen basking around the Knab and at the Sletts.

More energetic walkers can continue around Breiwick to the Ness of Sound, passing Pullar's Loch, a good spot to see wildfowl and perhaps even catch a glimpse of an otter. The Ness also contains the remains of Second World War gun emplacements once designed to protect the south entrance to Lerwick Harbour.

Alternatively, take the pathway from Clickimin around the east side of the Clickimin Loch and on to the summit of Staney Hill, from where the setting of Lerwick and its harbour can be properly appreciated. A hike along Cunningham Way, on the west side of the hill, will take you to Sandy Loch, the source of Lerwick's water supply.

Small boat harbour and Tolbooth

The small dock to the south of Victoria Pier is the home of Lerwick's lifeboat, a 1997 Severn Class vessel whose coxswain and crew have been decorated for several extraordinary rescue operations. The Swan, a restored Fife herring drifter built in Lerwick in 1900, can often be seen here, though from May to September she's often used for sail training and cruises around the islands. The Dim Riv, an imaginative reconstruction of an old Norse galley, does trips around the harbour during the summer. You can also catch a boat trip here to see the seabird cliffs at Bressay and Noss.

The peach-coloured building next to the small boat harbour is known as the old Tolbooth. Dating from 1776, it originally housed the sheriff court and prison, though it later became a post office, Fishermen's Mission and today is the headquarters of the Lerwick Lifeboat Station.

Across the road from the Town Hall, prominent cross-stepped gables lend the more restrained county buildings a particularly Scottish flavour. They house the sheriff court, police station and cells, and also featured in BBC's Shetland series.

Shetland Library

Shetland Library was built in the 1960s and occupies the building at Lower Hillhead. It's a friendly, helpful place where visitors are always welcome. There's free Wifi available throughout the library and computers available for use.

Below the library, on King Harald Street, you'll find the King George VI parks, comprising a well-equipped play park and adjacent flower park with a tennis court, bowling green and miniature golf in the summer months.

Fort Charlotte

At the northern end of Commercial Street you'll find Fort Charlotte, from which there are excellent views of Lerwick Harbour across to Bressay. Built in the 1660s, its pentagonal form was intended to house a garrison, defend the landward area and deny the use of Bressay Sound to any enemy. Unfortunately, it was burned by the Dutch in 1673 and lay ruined until 1782 when the barrack blocks seen today were built. Named after King George III's wife Queen Charlotte, it is the most complete surviving fort of its type.

Mareel

Mareel arts centre, which houses two cinemas, a live music venue and recording studios, sits alongside Hay's Dock. It shows a range of films and holds regular concerts reflecting a range of musical genres. There is also a cafe-bar providing light refreshments. See the website for opening hours and listings.

↓ Mareel David Gifford

↑ Hay's Dock David Gifford

Shetland Museum and Archives

Located at the historic Hay's Dock, the award-winning Shetland Museum and Archives is an invaluable resource for visitors and locals. Through a wide range of artefacts, documents, recordings, displays and events, it introduces Shetland's story, archives its past and provides a gateway to other local sites of interest. There's also a shop selling local crafts and gifts; an exhibition space; and a 120-seat auditorium. Entry is free and opening times vary throughout the year; check their website for further details. If you are tracing your Shetland ancestors, you can contact the Shetland Family History Society at secretary@shetlandfhs.org.uk.

Clickimin

There is a lovely pathway around the Clickimin Loch, where you will see many birds and, during the summer months, trow and elf houses! From here, you can follow paths around the back of the Anderson High School and up Stoney Hill.

At the southern end of the loch is Clickimin Broch, one of Shetland's major archaeological sites. It seems that the earliest structure, a Bronze Age house, was built on this small holm in the loch around 600BC. Further houses, a defensive ring wall, an impressive block house and the Broch tower were constructed in the Iron Age.

The Clickimin Leisure Complex is situated next to the loch and supports a wide range of sporting activities. It has superb facilities, including an excellent leisure pool, gym, health suite, sensory rooms, sports halls, outdoor pitches and an athletics track.

Up Helly Aa Exhibition

Up Helly Aa is Europe's largest fire festival. On the last Tuesday in January, nearly 1,000 torch-bearing guizers march through the streets of Lerwick behind a Viking galley, which is burnt with great ceremony following a day of festivities and as a prelude to a night of revelry. Open during the summer, the Up Helly Aa Exhibition celebrates this incredible festival; check the website for opening times.

Up Helly Aa ↓
David Gifford

